Ms. Khaliun Dovchinsuren presented her Ph.D. dissertation on Thursday, February 12.

Her thesis is about the excess volatility of consumption of many emerging economies based on macroeconomic data (in Chapter 1) and of Mongolia based on household survey data (in Chapters 2 and 3). She polished her thesis well by essentially answering all the comments made at the Interim Review. Although we recommend a few minor editorial changes, the Committee members (Professors Iida, Kato, Kucheryavyy, Nakata, and myself, Ueda) unanimously agreed to give her Pass on this Final Review.
